Cover Story

... their mission is

"Accidents just don't happen. They are caused because someone didn't check his fuel, somebody didn't inspect the plane or (the pilot) is pushing the weather."

The Civil Air Patrol insignia (above), proudly borne by planes and on the clothing of the volunteers. On the Cover: Bob Fikes, commander of the Civil Air Patrol squadron based at Upland's Cable Airport, displays the device used for locating emergency transmitters from downed aircraft.

Civil Air Patrol pilots are debriefed after returning from a recent search mission.

Squadron 25 flies at a moment's notice, pressed into search formation above Cable Airport in Upland whenever a private plane disappears.

Cable, the Civil Air Patrol's primary search base for the San Gabriel and Pomona valleys, is where pilots launched a search last week for four Norton Air Force Base airmen overdue from a weekend trip to Las Vegas.

The wreckage of a light plane was found in the San Bernardino Mountains on May 2. No one survived.

The last sign of the airmen's craft was pinpointed by FAA radar that helped shrink the target search area. "That contributed greatly to shortening the search," said squadron commander Bob Fikes.

Sheriff's deputies flown in by helicopter plucked the bodies from Bear Creek.

During the two-day CAP search, manned with squadron members from Upland and elsewhere, 42 craft crisscrossed the skies and logged 150 flying hours.

Fikes, an industrial arts department chair at Alta Loma High, made a route search from Las Vegas and scanned another 50-mile grid between Mt. Wilson and Mt. San Antonio in his own single engine Cessna. Pilots are reimbursed for fuel and maintenance.

The CAP, an auxiliary of the U.S. Air Force, is charged by Congress with locating private craft missing anywhere in the U.S., except on waterways.

Blips from commercial airliners and military craft are constantly tracked by radar. But general aviation pilots aren't even required to file flight plans.

Flight center information on private craft is funneled to Scott AFB in Illinois, the nation's rescue and recovery center. If a plane is lost, word is then forwarded to CAP wings in every state and a search mission dispatched, Commander Fikes said.

CAP pilots risked their lives and their property flying 141 missions in California last year, locating 94 aircraft and six survivors, according to squadron spokesman Lt. John Mouzakis.

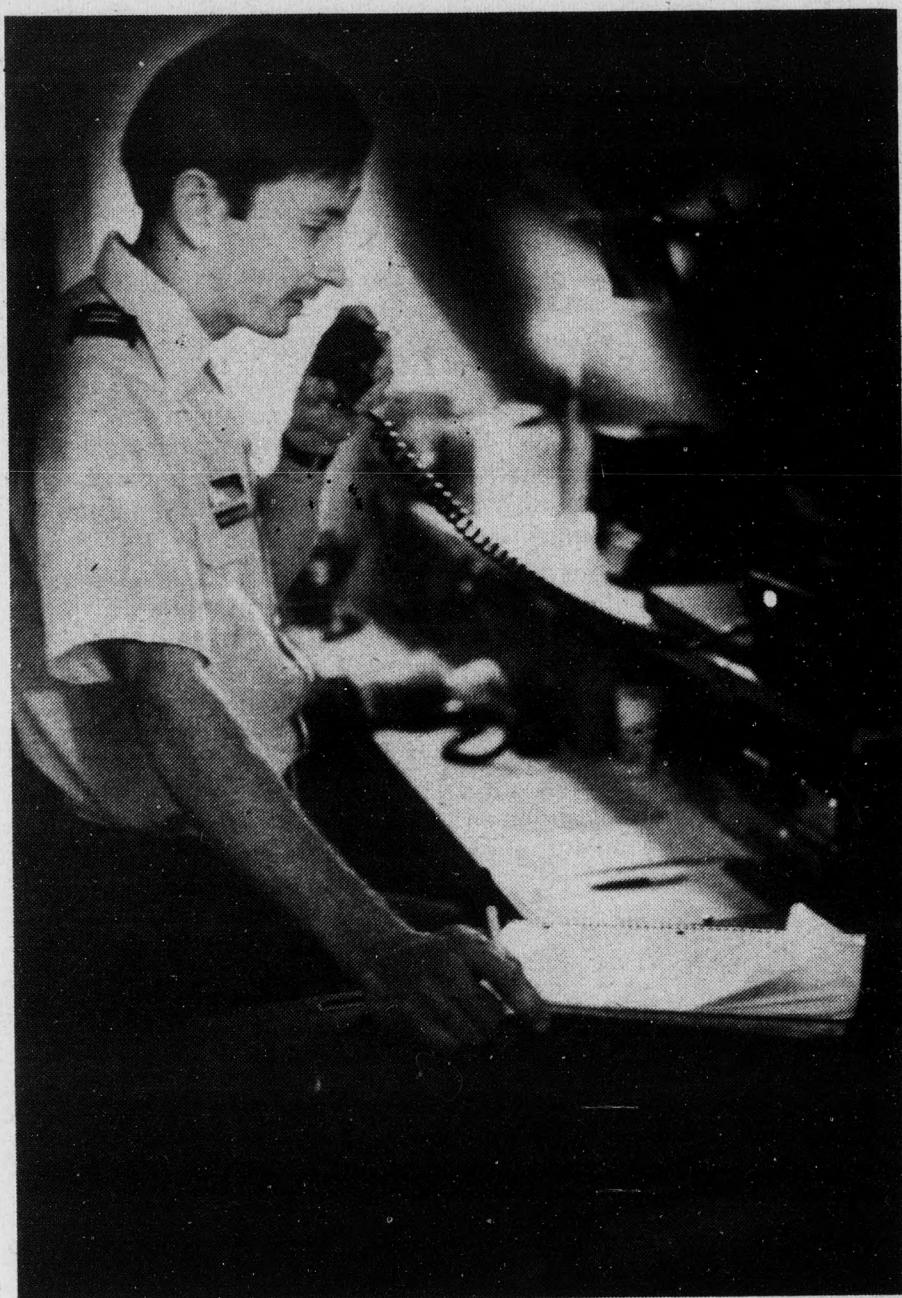

The state, home to one-eighth of the nation's pilots, also leads the nation in private plane crashes and fatalities, he said.

"It's a testimonial to the terrain. That's where the problems occur," Mousakis said.

Last year, seven private planes crashed in bad weather in Riverside and San Bernardino counties, said FAA inspector Ralph Palmer in Riverside.

"Nearly all are fatals," he said.

SEARCH and RESCUE

Jim Hutchings and Bob Fikes peer out the cabin on a search in the Mt. Baldy area.

"Accidents just don't happen. They are caused because someone didn't check his fuel, somebody didn't inspect the plane or (the pilot) is pushing the weather," Palmer said.

The volunteer pilots, scanning at low speed and low altitude over typical crash sites in rugged mountains, have tallied twice the normal accident record of normal aviation flying, Fikes said.

"We're working hard to improve it," he said. A search flying clinic was held last weekend for CAP pilots in Ontario.

Airman 1st Class John Jennings, 25, of Utah, the pilot who smashed the plane into the base of a mountain cliff on May 2, had less than 100 hours of flight time.

"That's scary. That's not experienced at all. But if you go into instrument conditions, unless a pilot can adjust within 30 seconds, it's all over," Fikes said.

"When you lose visual reference, it does funny things to you. It tells you you are spiraling to the left and you may be straight and level."

The commander said Cable Composite Squadron 25 has 40 senior members and 25 active emergency personnel. The squadron includes five mission pilots, four mission pilot trainees and three mission coordinator trainees.

The military influence, with Air Force-style uniforms and titles for pilots, is "why a lot of people join. Personally I think it should be distinctive," Fikes said. □

Biking for Special Olympics funds

By Mae Tate

Cycling remains more than a pastime for Joe Piscioneri Jr. of Upland, Mark Kasperowicz of Irvine and Dr. Michael Ash of San Bernardino.

Bicycling and fund-raising for the Special Olympics have been simultaneous activities for the trio since their college years together. Their 1983 trek was a round-trip journey from Irvine to Carlsbad, and generated approximately $4,000 for the Special Olympics.

"Our bicycling started when the three of us were Cal Poly students in 1980. When the gas shortage popped up, we went to bikes to save money and get to and around school," Piscioneri said. "Then we started cycling longer distances on the weekends. At the time, I was involved with Dominga High School (the valley school for developmentally disabled students). From that involvement came the commitment to get money

"This one was our hardest ride because we'd had two years to get soft and cushy. Our behinds just stung. I don't want to see a bicycle seat for at least a few weeks. But it was worth every moment of pain because the money will make it possible for more kids to take part in the Special Olympics."

Joe Piscioneri Jr.

for the Special Olympics."

Piscioneri is now a teacher at Valley View High School in Ontario. Kasperowicz is a program analyst in private industry. Dr. Ash is a dentist and captain with the U.S. Air Force, stationed at Norton Air Force Base in San Bernardino.

"Our first long-distance ride was 135 miles to San Diego in one day. We thought, 'if we can do this, why not do more?' So we decided to ride from the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco to UCLA during spring vacation," Piscioneri said.

He admitted the initial sponsor-gathering was amateurish. That first-time effort got them only $700 for the 600-mile ride winding along coastal routes, mountains, hills and valleys. The second ride in 1981, also during spring vacation, was from Laguna Beach to Carlsbad and back.

"We get a little more sophisticated each year in terms of getting sponsors. The second time we raised $1,000 for 100 miles," Piscioneri said. "The third year's trip was canceled because of the interference of school, finals, marriage plans, dental examinations. This year we went from Irvine to Carlsbad and back."

"We really got sophisticated this year in both our solicitations and the ride itself. We used a cover sheet that explained the ride's purpose and Fran Masterson and Melanie Kenealy discuss efforts to find out what happened to American servicemen in Southeast Asia.

Talk on MIAs, POWs planned for meeting

MIAs and POWs will be the topic of discussion for the Chaffey Community Women, Federated at their regular luncheon meeting Wednesday, May 18, at the Sycamore Inn, Rancho Cucamonga. A no-host social hour will start at 11:30 will lunch following at 12:15.

Melanie Kenealy, president of Chino Republican Women as well as a volunteer deeply involved with the MIA program, will speak along with Mrs. Fran Masterson, Upland. Masterson is the wife of a flyer listed as missing in action since 1968 when his plane developed engine trouble and he ejected from it over Laos.

Masterson has been active in the National League of POW/MIA Families. Kenealy and Masterson are working together to promote greater public knowledge of the plight of those 2,494 American servicemen and their families. The women have and continue to speak to service clubs, civic organizations and community groups to assist in carrying out President Reagan's request — "we must make the public more aware of this condition existing in Southeast Asia."

More than 5,000 red ribbons, created as a national symbol of the POW/MIAs, have been distributed by the two women.

Deadline for reservations is Friday, May 13. For more information or reservations, contact Joanne Cook, 982-9950.

Students from UHS run city for a day

The temporary mayor said his brief stint on the job will provide valuable experience for the future, when he will most likely run for the United States Senate or House of Representatives.

The one-day police chief did not seem to feel that it would be a major accomplishment if she really were to be named the first woman ever to head the city's police force.

A member of the planning commission admitted that he was entertaining thoughts of running for city council one day.

Campaign rumblings at Upland City Hall? Nope. The above were just some comments by the 24 Upland High School students who visited city hall last Thursday as part of Upland's annual "Students Run The City Day" activities.

The students, all seniors at the high school, were selected by their peers to fill positions on the city council, planning commission and a variety of other civil offices.

The idea was to give students, in the words of City Manager Lee Travers, "a deeper view into the day-to-day" activities of city officials.

The students began the day by pledging their loyalty in an oath administered by City Clerk Dee Carpenter. Later, they met with their professional counterparts, who discussed the duties and requirements of their respective jobs and shared some insight as to the normal functions of city government.

Students were later briefed and advised on what their make-believe tasks would be.

UHS teacher Sue Goggin, who served as advisor to the students, said the main objective of the program was to give students experience in "sitting on the other side where the decisions are made, and appreciate the difficulty in balancing the various interests

Upland Mayor John McCarthy briefs students early in the day as they prepare for their simulated running of the city. The students, all seniors at Upland High School, hoped to gain some insight into the every day functions of local government agencies.

Teacher Marion Moyses instructs her class at Arbor View School in Upland, which uses the Carden teaching method.

'The Method' works for Carden pupils

"I want children to learn and to enjoy learning. Life is a joy, so should be learning." - Mae Carden.

By DAVID MILLER

To her descendents in the world of academia, Mae Carden was the creator of The Method.

For more than four decades, until her death in 1977 at the age of 82, Carden launched a one woman campaign against "progressive" teaching techniques, which she felt overlooked fundamental learning skills and contributed to a decline in reading and writing abilities among school children.

So, beginning at a lone private day school in New York City in 1934, Carden set out to revive "old-fashioned" methods, leading a return to disciplined teaching of basic reading and writing skills while stressing individual "confidence and mastery without frustration or confusion."

She sought to train school children in speech and sentence rhythms. And she taught them to learn words by sounding out the letters rather than recognizing them by sight, a technique used with increasing frequency in U.S. schools prior to her initiation of the program in New York.

The immediate results were deemed so positive that the philosophy of "the method" spread, and schools across the country began to adopt the approach that Carden no doubt regarded as little more than a return to basic, "proven" teaching methods.

Today, more than 100 schools across the United States have adopted Mae Carden's name as well as the teaching approach she advocated. These schools report that their students consistently score above national averages when tested in reading, writing and arithmetic, and these same school children are apparently more interested in going to class than their non-Carden counterparts. All this because of the Carden method, its advocates say.

The West Valley's contingent to Miss Mae's school of thought is the Carden Arbor View School, 1510 N. San Antonio Ave., Upland. Opened in September 1981 with only 40 students, Carden Arbor View now teaches 145 pupils and Principal Claudia Humphries says interest in the school's curriculum is still growing.

Like all Carden schools, Arbor View is owned and operated by local individuals, though the teaching methods are unmistakably Mae Carden's. Open to all students who can meet the cost of tuition ($1,300 annual for kindergarten, $1,700 grades one through eight), the tiny institution draws from such areas as Glendora, Diamond Bar, San Dimas, Chino and Rancho Cucamonga.

Roughly 75 percent of the tuition payments go toward teachers' salaries, and the rest goes to pay off the buildings, which are leased by Humphries' husband.

From their first days at the school, youngsters are subjected to a strict, disciplined curriculum that is designed to maximize their learning potential. But despite its rigid appearance, says curriculum coordinator Carol Aseltine, the process allows students - and teachers - to maintain their individuality.

"The goal is to teach each child according to their own development," Aseltine says. The school staff tries to avoid competitive situations, which it believes can be damaging to a child's development. Instead, they take each student step-by-step at his or her own pace, reinforcing what they have learned while constantly encouraging them to improve upon their own personal achievements.

Much of the method involves the use of phonetics, or the sounding of letters and words. Educators from the Carden school begin at square one, moving students through the alphabet - consonants and vowels - and their sounds before progressing to words. An alternative approach used by many in academics is to have a child recognize a word in its entirety rather than know it piece by piece.

Although the Carden approach requires more "practice" than some alternatives and has been criticized as too "mechanical," the technique has proven so successful at Arbor View that many students advance to the first grade level of reading before completion of their kindergarten year. In addition, some of the more advanced second graders have been able to read at a level comparable to the average junior high or high school student.

Like many Carden schools, Arbor View has no students who can't read, and none of its students - even those with I.Q.s as low as 75 - have retarded reading abilities.

The staff attempts to have students finish two readers by the end of their kindergarten year. The first, like comparable books at other schools, includes pictures. The second, on the other hand, does not.

"We don't want to distort the mental image of the words," Aseltine says. The absence of pictures allows a child to become more creative in trying to come up with a mental image of what a particular word means or stands for, she says.

As soon as the children start to read sentences, they begin writing them. As part of the overall Carden curriculum, which also adheres closely to the arts, teachers use nursery rhymes to teach tenses and poetry recitation to help youngsters develop fluidity in their reading.

"What we're doing is trying to take them through literature that is meaningful all the time," Aseltine says, "to (help) give them a command of the English speaking method."

She says many students who come to Arbor View from schools that do not use the Carden or similar methods are clearly lacking in some basic areas in which Arbor View students excel.

"I had many children coming in last year who could read a word but did not understand what the word actually said," Aseltine says.

She says that because the Carden approach is less "eclectic" than other teaching methods, it allows for more continuity in the learning process. Arbor View students can handle basic addition and subtraction with numbers one through four and can count from one to 100 by the end of their kindergarten year.

A majority of the students can also read at least a simple sentence by that time although, Aseltine insists, the teachers put no pressure on youngsters to keep pace with their peers. From kindergarten through the eighth grade, students receive constant reinforcement of the basics.

"There's no one method that works with every child," says Aseltine, who has been a teacher for 13 years - two of those at Arbor View. "However, I have found that this method works for the children here."

As long as the "method" is successful, Aseltine maintains, why change? After all, she insists, even though Arbor View doesn't rush its students, the pace in which youngsters seem to improve is remarkable.

A key factor in the Carden approach is teaching with "dignity," and Humphries says that the teachers at Arbor View try to set a model example for their pupils.

"I'll tell you something about why I think we are unique," she says. "I won't hire a teacher if they don't think that a child is intelligent. All children can learn."

"We have a child here with learning disabilities. And the elementary school district has a hard time believing that he has a disability when they see what he has done here."

It is not that other schools are failing to do their job, Humphries says, but that many simply do not share the luxuries of Carden, such as a lower student-teacher ratio.

Class size at Arbor View rarely exceeds 15.

'Summer Stars' Theater planned at Chaffey College

The Chaffey College Theater Arts Department will again this year be sponsoring its special summer project, "Summer Stars Theater."

During the past two years, the Summer Stars Theater has presented the 1950s musical, "Grease" and a production of the long-running baseball comedy, "Bleacher Bums."

Production for this year will be "A Thurber Carnival." It will be presented during July.

"A Thurber Carnival" is a revue with music of the works of James Thurber, one of America's leading humorists. The production is being directed by C.A. Sheppard and performed by actors from the department.

Summer Stars is currently taking bookings for the month of July. Interested organizations or businesses should contact the Creative Arts Department, 987-1737, extension 524.

Library summer reading programs help youngster's vocabulary grow

By Linda Yao
Library director

Parents don't always take seriously the summer reading programs offered by local libraries.

Studies have consistently shown however that children taking part in summer reading activities score higher on vocabulary and reading tests. As Francis Harmon, librarian for the Upland School District and former reading specialist says, "Teachers find students much readier for reading materials at their grade level if they've had a summer reading experience."

Upland Library tries to provide an environment each summer where kids continue to learn, but where they have fun in the process. This year's Feast of Beastly Reading program will provide kids an incentive to keep reading, offer them a non-competitive milieu in which to learn and use skills learned in school, and provide plenty of personal attention and guidance in the selection of reading materials.

In addition, there will be movies and programs such as "Tron," "The Santa Ana Traveling Zoo" and "The Riede Marionettes." These programs make it easy to get kids to the library, but its the parents who have to have the motivation to bring them in regularly.

An estimated 20 percent of Americans are functionally illiterate. This means that though they may be able to read and write, they cannot do either well enough to cope with everyday activities. Consider this: a person needs to read at an eighth grade level to read directions on a TV dinner or read a federal income tax form; he or she must read at a 10th grade level to interpret instructions on an aspirin bottle; and it requires a 12th grade level to read an insurance policy. By the 1990's the minimum level necessary to function will be 12th grade.

All parents must be concerned to see that their children attain these necessary skills. The hard part is that this learning process is something which takes place over a long period of time. It requires a lifestyle where reading and studying are encouraged. So we here at the library unfortunately cannot say, "Bring your child in for our summer reading program and he or she will instantly read better and be brighter!"

What we can and do say is that the library provides an environment where learning can continue during those summer months when your child is out of school, and that taking advantage of such opportunities on a regular basis is the stuff of which successful education is made.

Despite cutbacks, students striving to learn

By Cheryl Bealer
Class of '84
Member of '82-83 Plaid staff

Public education does not lack coverage in the local and metropolitan newspapers. Reagan's school budget cuts are publicized as well as the depressing figures of national literacy and the decline of quality education.

Decisions by the supervisors of the Chaffey Joint Union High School District, such as the 5-period day or abandonment of driver's education as a graduation requirement, appear with regularity in community papers. But it isn't often that someone on the most important end of the education line (the receiving one) gets a chance to speak out.

It's true that public education is at an all-time low with reduced spending on the local, state and national levels.

It's true that a deficiency of scientists and technologists is projected for the future when the younger generation graduates into the older generation.

It's true that students are finding college entrance exams harder and harder to handle as their curriculum is being cut back.

It's true that the standard of education is on the decline in this country.

But, as a student of Upland High, I can say with confidence that the essential reason for the existence of those mildewy green buildings called Upland High still exists — and that one reason is to learn.

An average student attending Upland High still has a 100 percent chance of gaining something from "the high school experience." Myths like "Johnny can't read" are only myths at Upland. More than 75 percent of the students are taking college prep courses — most with the intention of going on to a higher education.

Spending is becoming an increasingly annoying problem at Upland but it is being combatted with parental support and work done by the students themselves. Often this dreary and gloomy side of high school is emphasized to the eyes of the community rather than the positive achievements of Upland.

One of these impressive accomplishments is the 254 gallons of blood accumulated in the Upland blood drive.

Members of Upland's Girl's League and California Scholarship Federation aided in the recent Special Olympics held at Chaffey High.

Several seniors qualified for the National Merit Scholarship Program (meaning they had one of the highest test scores in the country).

Thoughtful students have started a scholarship fund in memory of Anna Marie Bachoc, whose well-publicized murder brought much sympathy and shock from Upland students.

Perhaps school spending standards are going down but student service and spirit isn't. Some students still wish to learn and excel; some students still wish to get involved.

The only difference in education now and 10 years ago is that a student must have these wishes to excel if he wants to get something out of public education. Perhaps the current recession has provided students with an incentive: public education is lacking so they must pull themselves together to make up for the deficit in our nation's (school district's) budget.

Edison gets electricity from nine sources

Progress in Southern California Edison Company's two-year-old commitment to accelerate the development of alternative and renewable energy sources is slightly ahead of schedule in meeting its decade of the 80's commitment.

With the 1982 start-up of Solar One and the recent dedication of the ARCO Solar one megawatt solar photovoltaic facility, Edison now gets electricity from nine primary resources — oil, gas, wind, geothermal, coal, nuclear, biomass, solar and water — more resources than any other electric utility in the world.

Cogeneration, new hydroelectric power, wind power development and biomass projects are the pacesetters in SCE's shift to renewables, while promising steps continue toward commercial development of solar, geothermal and fuel cell technologies.

However, the potential price decreases in the utility's marginal fuel costs, due to uncertainties in the world oil market, and diminishing tax-credit incentives, could have a dampening effect on development momentum.

Edison has committed to encourage development of at least 2,150 megawatts (mw) by 1992, or nearly one-third of its additional new electric generation needs from such renewable and alternative sources.

Achievements in the past two years include a total of 1,500 mw of committed alternative and renewable resources — some of which are on line, some under construction, and the balance represented by signed contracts or letters of intent.

Achievements can include:

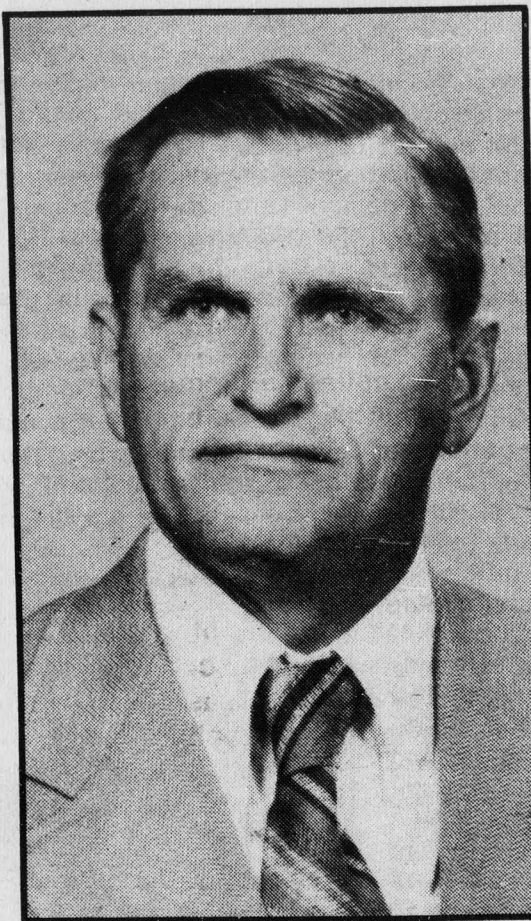

Cogeneration — Edison's plans through 1992 call for 1,000 mw of cogeneration capacity, of which 750 mw will be a firm resource

Randy Bond
Area manager
Southern California
Edison Company

dedicated to system needs. The remainder of this new power will be used to serve customers' on-site electrical needs which otherwise would have been provided by Edison. Commitments for 740 mw of this power source already are in place.

Hydroelectric — An additional 520 mw of this alternate energy source are expected during this decade; 320 mw from proposed "large" hydro projects, and another 200 mw from "small hydro" plants, each generating less than 30 megawatts.

Wind — Edison's goal by 1992 is for 200 mw of firm capacity wind power, requiring about 800 mw of installed nameplate capacity. By the end of 1982, seven wind parks developed in the Tehachapi Mountain Wind Resources Area by third-party entrepreneurs had contributed more than a million kilowatt-hours of power to the Edison system. Nearly 1,000 wind turbines of various design are expected to be installed and producing power before the end of 1983, increasing by 10-fold the wind-energy potential in the Tehachapi area.

Solar — More than 250 mw of electricity from solar energy technologies using either thermal or photovoltaic conversion are expected to be serving Edison customers by 1992. The 10-mw Solar One generating station located on 130-acres at Edison's Cool Water Generating Station near Dagget, California, began operation in April 1982 and was dedicated last November. Edison is operator of the power plant, the world's largest central receiver electric generating facility, which is a joint venture of Edison, the U.S. Department of Energy, Los Angeles Department of Water and Power, and the California Energy Commission.

Geothermal — The 1992 goal for Edison in utilizing heat from the core of the earth is 275 megawatts. The utility has operated a 10 mw geothermal unit at Brawley, California, since July 1980. This was joined by a second 10 mw unit at the Salton Sea in July 1982.

Biomass — The company is participating in the Ventura Regional County Waste-to-Energy and Resource Recovery Project scheduled to begin operation at 20 mw adjacent to the company's Ormond Beach Generating Station in 1986.

Fuel Cells — Edison also is supporting development of "fuel cells" by two leading high technology companies. A fuel cell produces electricity by combining air and fuel in a battery-like device without combustion and without any rotating machinery. Edison hopes to have a prototype in service in the second half of this decade, and has set a target of 55 mw of capacity by 1992.

Synthetic Fuels — "Synfuels" are another alternative to the more conventional energy resources. At Edison's Cool Water energy development complex, SCE is participating with an international consortium of energy companies in one of the world's leading ventures in this field.

Significant to providing this developmental lead time are Edison's other major resource additions, scheduled to meet new customer energy requirements in the next few years. Among these are San Onofre Nuclear Generating Station Units 2 and 3.

In these trying economic times are you pinching pennies? If so, how?

Denise La Crosse, Upland...
"Right now I'm stretched to the limit. I'm going to school and working for my dad. It's actually a handout because he could get someone much more qualified. Right now I just don't buy as much."

Toni Bauter, Upland...
"One of the things we do is go to the library instead of buying books. With the way my family enjoys reading, we'd be on Skid Row if we had to buy them."

Pearl Jones, Chino...
"We try to pinch pennies but we can't do much more than we already are. One difference is we used to buy a lot of clothes and we don't now. We also don't eat out as often."

Claudia Ferguson, Upland...
"For the first time in my life, I'm using store coupons. I never thought that I would ever be doing that. Of course we're eating a lot more chicken and hamburger too. I guess we've just cut back everywhere where we could at least a little."

Member's involvement stressed in the Catholic Church of today

Since Vatican II Council, many seem to have the idea that the Catholic Church has been subjected to a complete turn-about.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Substantially, everything is the same. The windows of discussion, research and attitude have been opened; the edifice, built on rock solid ground still remains.

In doctrine or in dogma there has been no fundamental alteration. The most deeply felt catharsis was the introduction of the vernacular in the Mass, as in the administration of the Sacraments. In our present day liturgy, people now hear their own living tongue, not that of the dead languages of the past, namely Latin and Greek.

Involvement is now stressed. No longer is the great sacrifice a one-man performance, but an encounter with the Lord shared by all those present. Truly now, the congregation prays together when the celebrant, as in yesteryears, proclaims, "Let us pray." A new era of openness in spirit, mind and above all in soul-searching has been born.

The mystery of faith, clouding our finite minds in an endeavor to understand God's ways, will ever be present; but we now approach the divine chambers and tribunal, as children of a loving and supremely merciful Father. Sin assumes a concept of the rupturing of our filial relations with one who has declared: "I no longer call you servants, you are now sons and daughters." We are encouraged to serve from a LOVE motivation, not from fear: the 10 Commandments no longer act as a computer device, but as a lighthouse pointing out the way to a truer, more rewarding life as we reach out to beget an integral personality.

In matters of ecclesial legislation, our Holy Mother Church has grown kinder. Blind obedience is replaced by superiors more understanding of humanity, and less dictatorial in their demands. Sharing, collegiality, advice and counsel-quests replaces postulates. The present day insistence is that we are one and all, involved and that together we share our concerns.

In the Church of today our men and women have received a new if more demanding commitment. The laity have assumed roles as sacramental ministers, lectors, leaders of the apostalates of Marriage preparation and Baptism catechesis. Episcopally designated men and women bring the Eucharist to the sick and also lead in paraliturgical services where no priest is available.

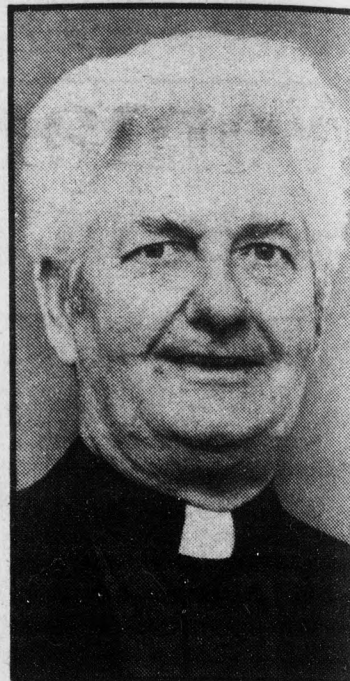

Each week lay members teach religion to those pupils who attend the public school system. They are the shock troops of Christ's kingdom in our modern day. In inculcating moral principles, and in stressing that goodness is its own reward, they not only enlighten our youngsters on what God desires of them: they also strive to provide for our nation loyal and law abiding citizens. In their didactic efforts, they lessen crime and assist in decreasing the load of our overburdened courts.

For us Priests, the birth and growth of Priests Senates, and the establishments of Priests Councils, on a Diocesan level was the most rewarding advance. Before 1968 there was no mechanism for Diocesan Priests to organize, nor voice their views. There now exists in most Dioceses personnel boards, pension plans, reconciliation and arbitration courts, and continuing education programs. Priests now have a voice in decision making, especially where their own faith is concerned.

Ours is the same Church. The organization established by Christ for the salvation of mankind, a goal to be won by the observance of the Commandments with the aid of the Sacraments. The modern Church, as I view it, is a vibrant active, energetic people seeking and loving a Divine One, who is always listening and answering the calls addressed to Him. It is not a caste whose members believe that everything that is wrong, is the fault of our predecessors and will be corrected by our successors. We are the children of God marching on to the Promise Land — now. If we cannot destroy evil, we can make good more present. We realize that on our yesterdays are built our tomorrows; each day I am reborn, each day I live again.

Woman sings her way through life

By Peggy Olson

Louise Shropshire's earliest memories are of singing gospel songs with 12 brothers and sisters. Walking to church in Cincinnati — sometimes without shoes — the family broke out in song.

The children, encouraged by their mother, Ollie Jarrett, sang as they scrubbed clothes on washboards and swept floors in their modest home.

The brothers and sisters sang to celebrate Thanksgiving and joined hands to sing "Nearer My God To Thee" before Santa's arrival on Christmas Eve.

Mrs. Shropshire, 72, now of Pomona, made her mark in life with music.

In 1951, she teamed with her mother and sister, Alice McCloud (now of San Dimas) to form a gospel trio, "The Humble Three." The group traveled throughout the nation to raise funds for various church activities.

Mrs. Shropshire recalled that her mother sang bass and "people would just love her."

A composer, Mrs. Shropshire wrote original music for the group, which made appearances at the National Convention of Gospel Choirs and Choruses.

Among her compositions is a musical drama, "The Way to the Cross" and a tune entitled "We'll Overcome."

On one occasion, Mrs. Shropshire shared the convention stage with Mahalia Jackson.

Jackson is a choir director, minister of music and a member of the National Association of Gospel Singers of America.

In 1964, Mrs. Shropshire chaired a banquet held at the Netherland Plaza Hotel in Cincinnati to honor civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. King later paid several visits to her home.

After the death of her husband, Mrs. Shropshire moved to Pomona where she founded the Greater New Light Baptist Church. She continues to direct the choir and is the church organist.

Nicholsons came to Upland in '01

By John H. Nicholson

It seems that word leaked out that I have been around Upland a bit longer than some other folks. That seems to qualify me as an "old timer." Thus, someone suggested to the Upland

John Nicholson

Looking backwards

News that I should be able to write a column on the "old days" around here. I remarked that there were others who had been here longer, so why not them? Evidently they had all refused. Probably smart of them. And there at the bottom of the barrel, was old, gullible, me. So, with the readers indulgence, why not give it a try. With no contract in effect, either the Upland News or I can forget it all, if that ever seems best.

One warning! What appears here will be just what I recall, through the years, and things my family told me about. Naturally, I believed all I was told. There won't be much on civic affairs, famous people, and the like. More, perhaps on street cars, dusty roads, rabbits and squirrels, and similar wonders.

I arrived in our fair city on November 12, 1915, as I have often said, by stork. My parents always insisted it was a bit more complicated than that. Checking a copy of my birth certificate, I find that a Dr. O.M. Kankel was on hand to make my arrival official. Perhaps we should go back a little more and establish where my parents came from and how they got here. Incidentally, at least in later years, I always called them "Mom" and "Pop," and will respectfully use those names as we go along.

Pop was born in Danville, Ill., the son of Joseph and Isabelle Nicholson. Joseph had two previous children, Edwin and Agnes, by a first wife. All lived together as a happy family. Joseph hailed from England, where he lived in a village called "The Hobson." It may have been on the lands of The Hobson Coal Mine, or something similar. He claimed he lived so close to the Scotch border that he could heave a hunk of coal from his backyard over into Scotland. But, he never mentioned any thrifty Scot ever heaving one back again.

Joseph apprenticed into the carpenter trade and became a real artisan at working with wood. Something caused him to move to Illinois, where he started a family. There, in Danville, my Pop was born on October 16, 1892.

The family moved to California in May of 1901, spending about a month in Santa Monica, and then settling in North Ontario. This according to an old ledger of Grandpa's which has a wealth of data and dates. He notes much work for F.M. Walton, at a rate of $2.50 per day. Others he worked for were Mr. Burkholder and John and Frank Gerry. As I recall the Gerry

Reports from the police department

Compiled by Ian Fallis

Monday, May 2

At 9:39 a.m., a man reported that his carpentry tools had been stolen from a vacant apartment in the 300 block of North San Antonio Avenue. The tools were valued at $214.

At 10:48 a.m., the California Highway Patrol reported that the signal on northbound Mountain Avenue at Seventh Street was red, green and yellow — all at the same time. Police put the signal on flashing red until the city's engineering department could work on it.

At 12:52 p.m., Pioneer Junior High School officials reported they had a student in custody for possessing marijuana. Officers cited him for possession of less than an ounce of marijuana.

At 4:46 p.m., a man reported that two children were playing with fire in his yard at 193 Grayson Way. When police arrived, they found an 8-year-old and a 10-year-old who had set a newspaper on fire. They strongly counseled the two and released them.

At 9:46 p.m., two men dumped nine to 12 pot roasts in a rubber trash can at Alpha Beta at 829 W. Foothill Blvd., and absconded with them. The men were black, and one was 6 feet 1 inch tall and weighed about 175 pounds.

Tuesday, May 3

At 7:23 a.m., city yards requested an officer to take an accident report there, at 1460 N. Benson Ave. One of the city trucks had rolled into two other parked vehicles during the night.

At 9:30 a.m., a woman reported that her purse had been stolen in the 200 block of North San Antonio Avenue. Officers contacted four juveniles, arrested one for delaying a police officer, and recovered the purse

Life is a song for this woman

Recently her voice has reverberated through the halls of Park Place Convalescent Hospital, where her mother is a resident.

Jan Berg-Johnson, director of the facility's "Quality of Life" program, noticed that Mrs. Shropshire appeared at the hospital nearly every day to visit her mother.

The director convinced Mrs. Shropshire to join the volunteers in their quest to brighten the lives of all patients at the facility.

Mrs. Berg-Johnson said she unearthed a "golden nugget" when she recruited Mrs. Shropshire's services. "She is one of our most active senior volunteers."

A member of the project board, Mrs. Shropshire has volunteered to head the group's upcoming fund-raising drive.

The women explained that the program was organized to enhance the quality of each patient's life through fulfilling activities and inspirational programs. These are planned by a council consisting of staff, volunteers and patient representatives.

In addition, each volunteer selects one patient to visit on a regular basis. The volunteer thus provides the patient with a link to the "outside world," said Mrs. Berg-Johnson.

She said Mrs. Shropshire exemplifies the "ideal" volunteer. The Pomona woman brings to her tasks "a wealth of experience," the director said.

Recently, Mrs. Shropshire organized a program to celebrate her mother's 104th birthday.

Mrs. Jarrett was the center of attention as her family paid tribute to her in words and song. Participating in a gospel concert were Mrs. Shropshire, Mrs. McCloud, their brother, Garland Jarrett, cousin, Claudia Martin, and a Jarrett granddaughter, Mary Lee.

It was her mother's inspiration, Mrs. Shropshire said, which enabled her to make contributions to the world of music and the history of her people.

"She scrubbed floors on her knees to support 13 children. She took us to church and taught us cleanliness and Godliness. She taught us to sing and believed that if God would provide for one he would provide for all," Mrs. Shropshire said.

Mrs. Jarrett admonished her children to "do your best" at everything attempted. And, concluded Mrs. Shropshire, she reminded us that "God gave everyone a gift and ours was singing." □ nearby. Nothing was missing from it.

At 7:35 p.m., an employee at Hanover's Ranch Market at 1383 E. Foothill Blvd. reported that three men had been in the store acting suspiciously. They had filled an ice chest with meat, then left the store without it. (Police later surmised they may have been the same men who stole the roasts from Alpha Beta Monday night.)

Wednesday, May 4

At 8:59 a.m., a woman reported that a teenager had exposed himself to her at 5 p.m. Tuesday. The youth was Caucasian, 15 to 17 years old, 130 pounds, with short blond hair.

At 2:57 p.m., a woman reported that two juveniles had snatched her purse behind a store in the 200 block of South Mountain Avenue.

Thursday, May 5

At 2:42 a.m., police found the doors of two businesses at 1667 N. Mountain Ave. pried open, and arrested two juveniles on suspicion of burglary. One was later released to his father, and the other was taken to juvenile hall.

At 4:12 a.m., a man called to say a car had hit the curb in the 200 south block of southbound Euclid Avenue. When police arrived, the driver told them she had fallen asleep. Nothing was damaged and the driver was not injured.

At 7:54 a.m., two cars collided in front of Upland High School, but no one was injured and the drivers exchanged information.

At 3:28 p.m., a woman called to say her two Miniature Schnauzers had been stolen from the 300 block of Sinclair Avenue. One of the dogs was a silver and gray female, the other a black male.

Friday, May 6

At 9:47 p.m., a woman reported that someone had stolen her Sulphur-crested Cockatoo, valued at $2,000. It was stolen from a cage on the rear patio of her home in the 1500 block of North Euclid Avenue.

At 10:35 p.m., a man reported that a screen was off the window and a light was on inside the First Baptist Church at 531 W. Eighth St. When police arrived, they discovered that someone had indeed broken into the church, between 9 p.m. and the time of the report, and taken food.

Sunday, May 8

At 1:29 p.m., a man came into the Upland Police Station to report an assault — his girlfriend bit him. When police found out the assault had occurred in Ontario, they referred him to Ontario police.

Monday, May 9

At 3:21 p.m., two burglaries were reported at Ruggs Lumber, 120 S. Euclid Ave. The items were taken during business hours. They included a lawnmower, a Weedeater, $704 worth of plywood, a belt sander and belts for the sander.

Grandpa built East Ninth Street house in 1902 homes, two of them, were demolished in 1957 to make way for the new Hottle's Upland Furniture Co. at Euclid Avenue and C Street. The ledger indicates that Joseph's entire income for the year of 1901 was $589.40. It dropped a bit, then hit $787.65 in 1903.

Grandpa bought two lots with an old house, on East Ninth St., from a Mr. Wooley, in February, 1902, for $500. He tore down the old shack in March and started his new house. He hired help and was able to move in on July 28, 1902. The fine old home still stands at 636 East Ninth St., still looking as good as new. He budded 35 lemon trees on the property, making them orange trees. In December of 1904, the first crop of 42 boxes brought in $23.67.

I should have mentioned that my Pop was better known as Carl M. Nicholson. He told me that when he first arrived here, what we now know as Mount Baldy was still just a big hole in the ground, and just look how it has grown. It is now over 10,000 feet high. Naturally, I believed that. At that time, the area east of Fourth Avenue, between the Santa Fe tracks and the homes on Ninth Street contained ramshackle quarters for the numerous Chinese laborers who picked fruit and did all sorts of menial labor such as digging the ditches for irrigation piping systems. Evidently, they also dug water tunnels in some areas. Once, in the 1950 era, a full-grown lemon tree, on the west side of Mountain Avenue, at 20th Street, suddenly dropped about 15 feet, along with the soil around it. Old timers said it was another water tunnel collapse. In the area where the Chinese lived were sizeable fruit drying yards, where apricots, peaches, and such fruit were prepared for market.

Pop told of one old fellow who had a small wagon, a horse, and a shotgun. Daily, he roamed the vast brush covered lands between North Ontario and Cucamonga, shooting dozens of rabbits. He took them to the Santa Fe station and shipped them to

Los Angeles where they were sold as fresh meat. As a youngster, Pop attended grade school at the southeast corner of Euclid and Ninth Street. When a new Grammar School was built on 10th Street between Third and Fifth avenues, the old school site became a lumber yard. It is now the site of Upland Savings and Loan Assn.

Back to Grandpa's ledger. The first mention he made of Upland was in 1904, so the name change must have happened between 1901 and 1904. He noted monthly expenses also. His average electric bill ran about $1.25 and water was about $1.35 per month. He mentions that water meters were put in on East Ninth Street on January 25, 1905.

An especially outlined note reads, "My dear wife, Isabelle Nicholson, died Feb. 5th, 1904. Aged 52 years. Interred at Bellvue Cemetery, Upland, California, Feb. 7th, 1904." "She died of diabetes." (Joseph joined her there several years later). In July of 1905, Grandpa sold the Ninth Street home to J.C. Mehl for $1950. Mr. Mehl and his family operated a hardware store on Second Avenue, where The Bookworm of Upland is now in business. The Nicholsons moved to Long Beach, eventually buying a home at 812 Olive St. for $3300, $1235 down and the balance at $15 per month at 7 percent interest.

It was while in Long Beach that Pop got into boating and fishing, which he later passed on to me. The family returned to Upland in March of 1909, renting three rooms from Dr. Button. And here they stayed.

Grandpa Nicholson had at least one other skill. He was said to be an accomplished organist, on the old foot-pumped organ. In his later years, he became almost stone-deaf, but he worked out a way of hearing what he played, using a stick of wood. One end was held against the organ, while the other end was gripped between his teeth. The vibrations of the organ came through nicely and he could enjoy his music. He was gone before I arrived on the scene, and I never had the pleasure of knowing him.

that all governments have to try to achieve."

Not all of the students have experience in student body government at the high school, but Goggin said that many have expressed some interest in running for office later in their adult lives.

In order to serve in their one-day positions at the city, each student had to run for his or her respective position against other students and had to file an authentic campaign statement.

"They nominated themselves," Goggin said. "We have a nominating process, which involves the signatures of other students. We try to simulate the actual process as much as possible."

Goggin said the students have been encouraged to attend city council and other civic meetings. She said the students appear "serious" in their motivations for becoming involved in the program. Many apparently chose the positions that they would most likely opt for if they decided to run for public office. In this, Goggin's third year as advisor, the level of participation has been "the best ever."

Upland Mayor John McCarthy told his student counterpart, as well as the students serving as city council members, of the financial problems faced by the city. He cautioned the students against making hasty decisions on several recommendations that would come before them later in the day. This included a request for building permit by a chain pizza restaurant and a proposal to assess a fee to pay for maintenance of trees and parks in the city.

"As a council, once you establish a policy you are going to be stuck with that policy," McCarthy said.

Student Mayor David Grossberg, whose political aspirations are perhaps symbolized by the fervor with which he has sought advice from local and national government leaders, considered the lessons learned from the experience invaluable.

"The experience you get from it — you can't tell how something like that works from the outside," the 17-year-old Grossberg said. "It's just a good way to learn what's going on first-hand."

Grossberg, who has worked with politicians such as Congressman George Brown and former Congressman Jim Lloyd, says he was offered a job as a Congressional page two years ago but turned it down.

Having chosen not to pursue activity in student government — he became "bored" with it as a high school freshman in Texas — he hopes to seek a career as a corporate lawyer and use it as a stepping stone into Congress.

"I do a little more than most people my age," Grossberg says. "I like to prepare early."

he house that Cracker Jacks built is in Upland. It was the retirement home of Henry G. Eckstein, inventor of the moisture-proof package that put the crack in Cracker Jacks.

Today, it's a treasury of Asian and Oriental collectibles gathered during a decade of traveling by Faye and Dwight Bert, who purchased the home nine years ago.

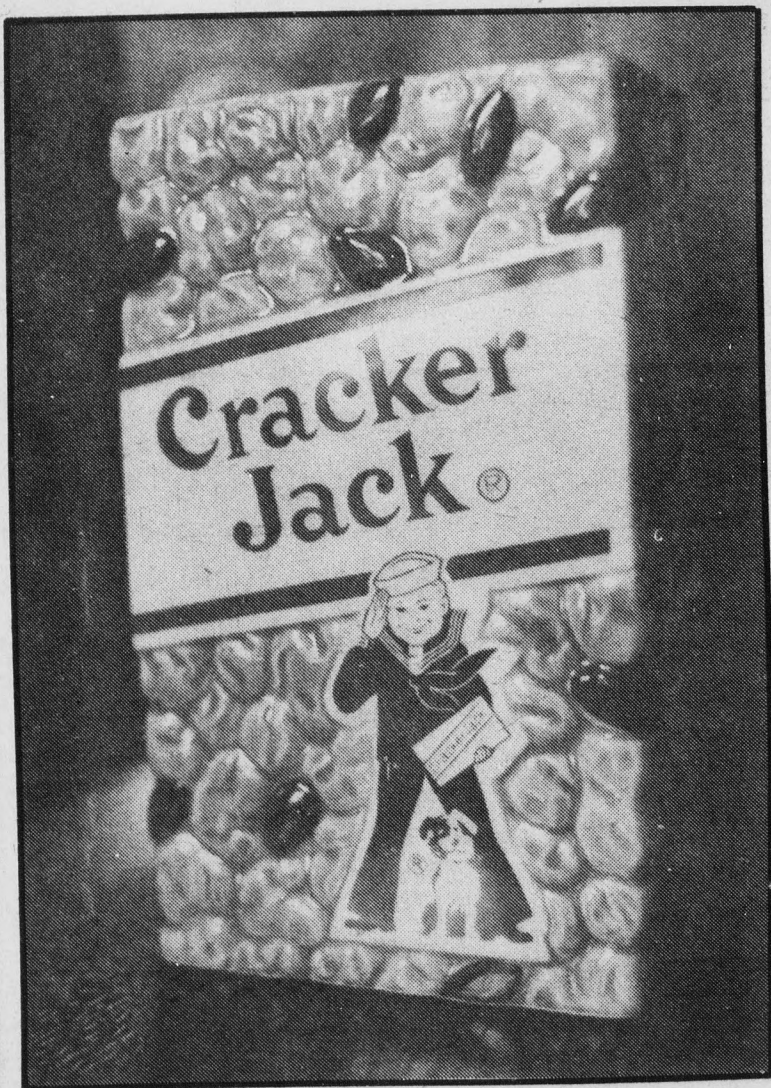

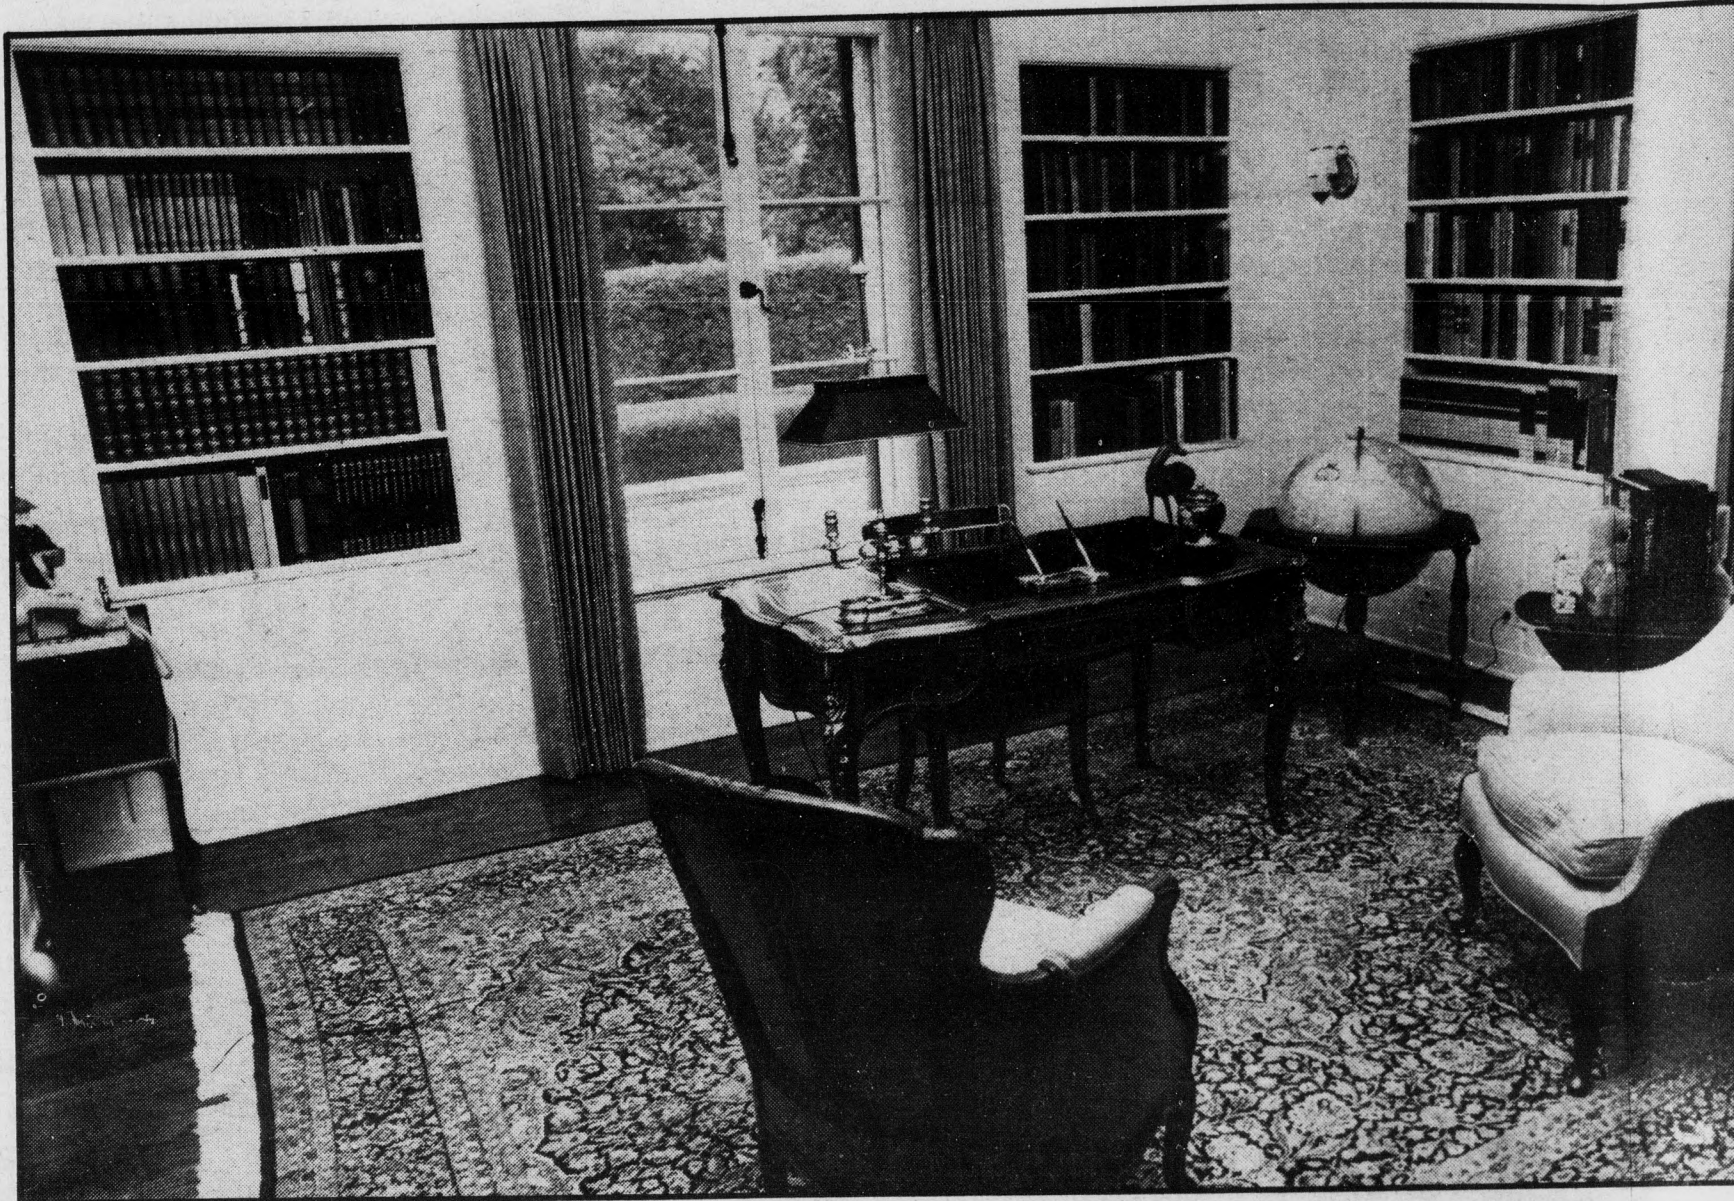

The Berts have refurbished the sprawling home that has nine rooms and a servants' wing, combining their own traditional pieces with china, crystal and furniture left in the abandoned and deteriorating house by the Eckstein family.

Mrs. Eckstein died in 1937. Her children, who live on the Eastern Seaboard, used the home and its 20 acres as a winter retreat until 1953. During the following 20 years, only the groundskeeper lived in the Euclid Avenue home.

Potential buyers were put off because part of the estate lay in the path of the proposed Foothill Freeway. With less emphasis on freeway development by the Brown Administration, a portion of the land was sold to a developer. Only 3.5 acres are left around the original home.

The inventor used the same idea that made him famous when he built the sprawling Monterey-style home in 1931. The floors and 12-inch thick walls have double layers, with an airspace in between.

The House th

Mrs. Faye Bert sits next to the living room's Indian tapestry (above) of beads and precious stones. A ceramic Cracker Jack box (left photo) from a library table.

Eckstein didn't quit there. The inventor had a heater and thermostat put in every room, a sophisticated system for the era, Faye Bert said. As a result, the basement is choked with ducts from nine heaters and three filter systems to warm and cool the 8,500 square foot house. A small sticker pasted to each heater indicates which room it heats.

The Cracker Jack house can be seen on a benefit home tour this Sunday between 2 and 4 p.m. for the Upland-based Samaritan Center for Pastoral Counseling.

The Berts, fourth-generation Uplanders, were careful to preserve the original feeling of the home when they began to renovate, said interior designer Betty Wood, of Design West Interiors in Upland.

Mrs. Bert says the modern kitchen with a Mediterranean motif is the only real mistake. The antiseptic-looking work area is a stark contrast to the rest of the home, where warm colors dominate the formal, but inviting, rooms.

When the Berts' former home sold more quickly than expected, the couple literally had to camp out in the Cracker Jack house, using a Coleman stove to cook with.

"It was awful," recalled Mrs. Bert. "We were going to store everything and stay in a hotel somewhere, but the workmen were here and there was no way to talk to them."

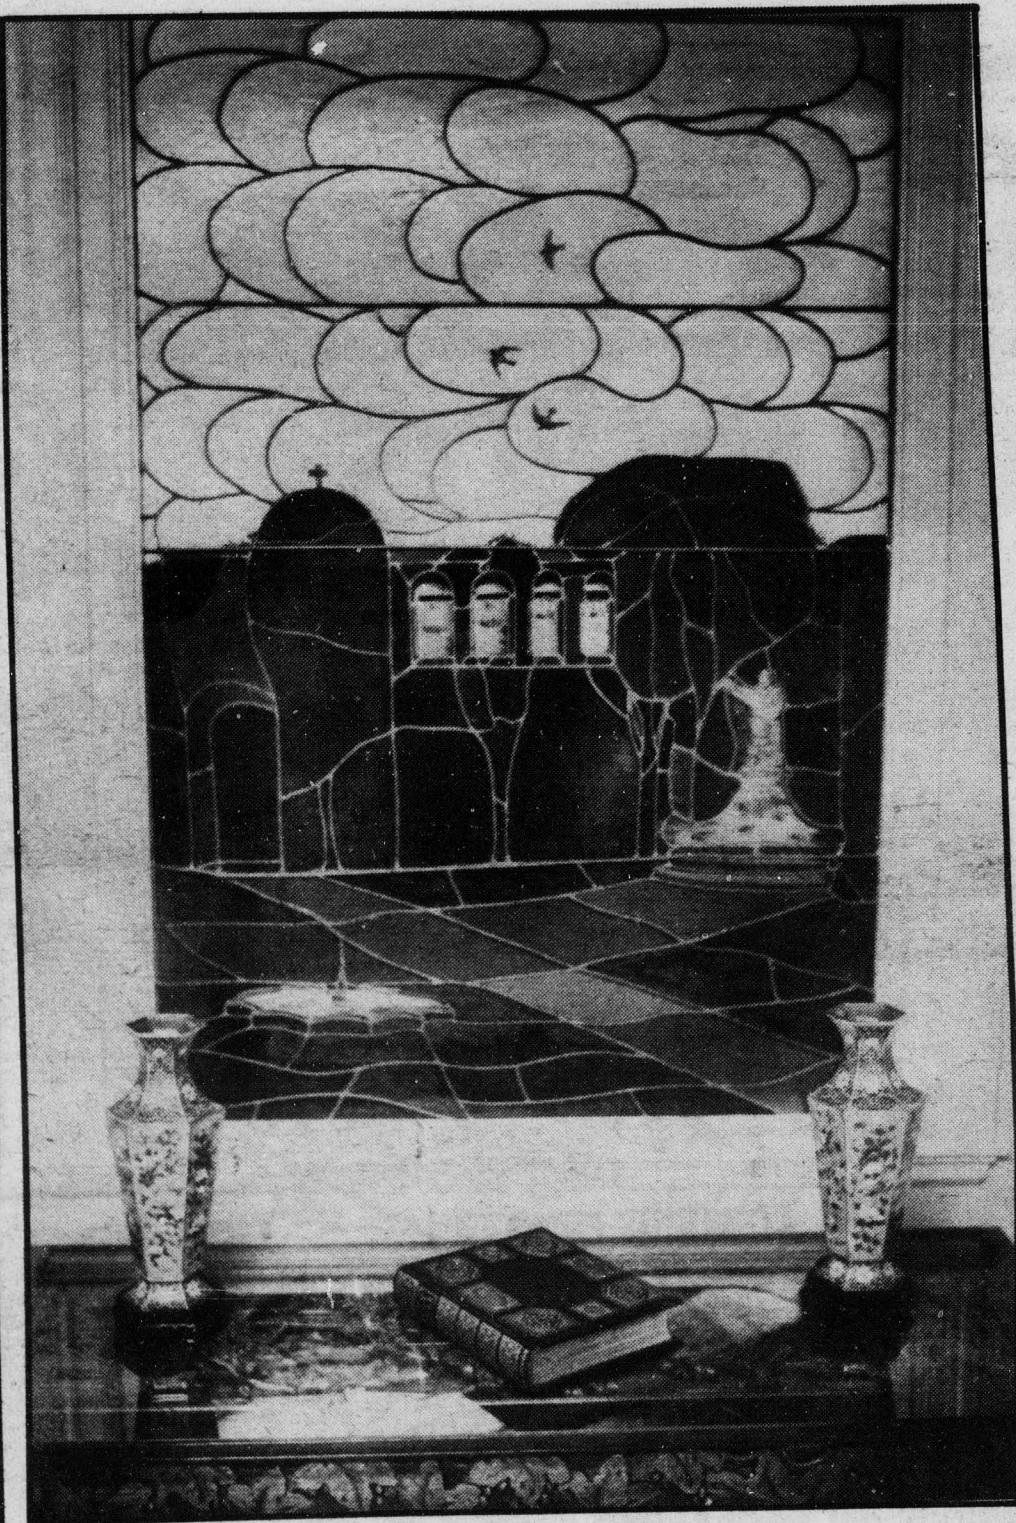

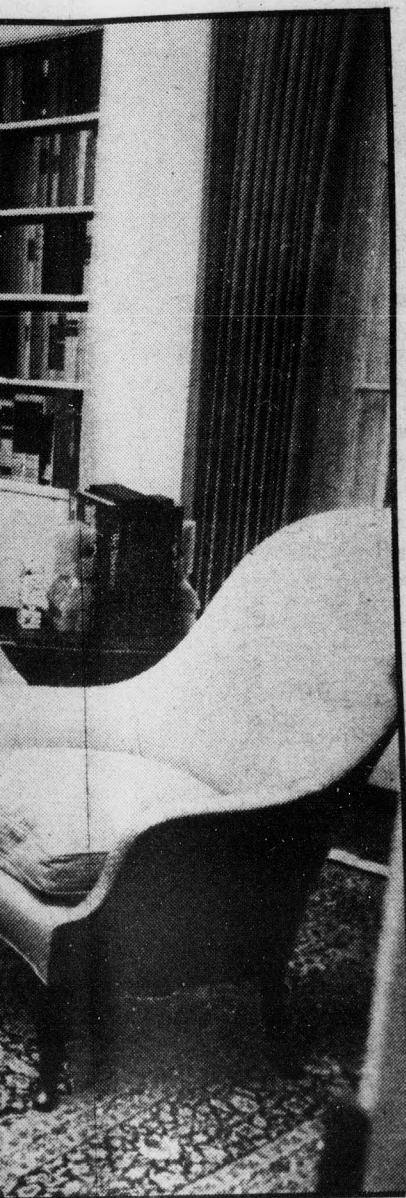

On entering the house, a visitor's first sight is a painted and leaded window of the San Juan Capistrano mission. The window was created in 1974 by Stan Hansen.

Under the window is an elaborately carved mahogany glass-topped coffee table from Hong Kong. At the table's right is a black and carmel Italian marble half-column, a stand for a Chinese cloisonne vase.

The entry, like every other room, is dotted with foreign treasures.

In the living room, an Indian tapestry of beads and precious stones hangs between two Oriental rosewood chairs inlaid with pearl.

A leather-topped Louis XV writing table and two antique French chairs fill up a small library. Old volumes line the shelves, including a 1917 edition of "Message of the Presidents." A ceramic bank that looks like a box of Cracker Jacks is on a table.

The dining room, with walls upholstered in imported brocade damask, is dominated by a large curio cabinet filled with crystal. A Delft plate from the

A mixture of traditional furniture and exotic ornaments, the home contains "a blend of our life," Mrs. Bert said.

Mrs. Bert said her husband, a former owner of Upland Feed and Fuel, has made several overseas sojourns with the International Executive Service Corps. The quasi-public agency sends former or retired executives to developing countries.

A feed and milling expert, Mr. Bert spent three months in India. A goat skin from that expedition hangs in an office in the home.

"It's an ugly thing, but he's so proud of it," Mrs. Bert said.

The couple have visited every continent except Africa, beginning their travels after their sons, Ted, 33, and Joe, 30, were grown.

Mr. Bert now is involved in several commercial ventures.

Tickets for the home tour are $3 each or two for $5, and may be obtained at Hottle's Furniture, 300 N. Euclid Ave., Upland; Barbara Cheatley Antiques, 219 Yale Ave., Claremont; and Golden Web Boutique, 235 N. Euclid Ave, Ontario. Tickets may also be purchased Sunday at the home, 1936 Euclid Ave., Upland.

The center benefitting from the tour was established by pastors in 1973 and also meets the counseling needs of non-church members. Clients pay on a sliding scale according to income.

The Samaritan Center is supported by the West End United Way, churches, service clubs and individuals. □

Parks agency seeks senior volunteers

If you are an active retired person, if you own a travel trailer, if you enjoy camping, and if you enjoy meeting the public, consider being a year-round or seasonal volunteer resident park host for the Riverside County Parks Department.

The department has 46 volunteer resident sites on 17 park facilities from Corona to Blythe.

Clair Kuss, coordinator of this program, said: "Right now we have vacancies at Lake Skinner, and we also need people for the summer months in the San Jacinto Mountains. We also want to establish an eligibility list."

A volunteer park host works 20 hours a week in exchange for a rent-free resident site. There is a small monthly charge for electricity. The duties are minor housekeeping and maintenance tasks. Mr. Kuss also said that a work schedule is planned in accordance to each person's background and working skills. Upland children to be fingerprinted

By Joy Sommer

Fingerprinting every Upland child from infancy to age 21 may be an ambitious undertaking but that doesn't deter Eileen Newman and Marsha Schwartz. They are women with a cause. That cause is "Operation Fingerprint."

Schwartz, president of the Pioneer Junior High School PTSA, and Newman, out-going president of Sierra Vista PTA, said they are committed to the project because they think the program is needed. Since the Upland Police Department doesn't have the manpower to do it, it's up to the PTA and concerned community members to "pick up the ball," they said.

The program, entirely voluntary and free, provides parents the chance to have their children fingerprinted and allows them to retain the cards. "We feel it's vital that the parents of the children in Upland have an opportunity take advantage of this free service," Schwartz said. "God forbid anything ever happens but in the case of foul play, disaster or run-away, the fingerprints can provide vital information that usually wouldn't be available."

The records (fingerprint cards) are for the parent's or guardian's personal files and are only used when deemed necessary. "It's not like the children's prints are being put into some big file somewhere," Newman said. "It's always up to the parents when and if they are ever used."

Upland School District Superintendent George Renworth has been "very supportive" of the proposed program, the women said. "George is allowing us to use district property (two schools) for the fingerprinting and he has been very helpful in getting this started," Newman said.

Although Officer Dick Novelle, Upland Police Department, first presented the program to the PTA presidents a few months ago, the project has come together in the last week or so.

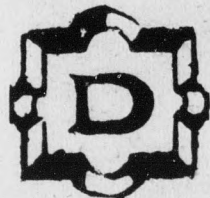

"No one was exactly in charge and time was slipping away from us, then one day I got a call from one of the other presidents who said, 'I heard you are in charge.' From that time on Eileen and I just got busy," Schwartz said.

The two did get busy quickly. In less than a week, they had arranged locations and dates and coordinated training sessions for volunteers.

"Yes, we did get moving on it pretty quickly," Schwartz said. "But the school year is winding up and if we wanted to do it before the summer, which

Upland swimmers gain national honors

Five Upland swimmers were among 32 members of the Industry Hills Aquatics Club who were honored recently by United States Swimming, the national governing body of amateur swimming.

Jeff Kostoff, the Upland High School senior who set seven national age group records, was the top honoree at a special Industry Hills banquet for club members who finished in the top 16 in the U.S. during the 1982 short and long course seasons.

Other Upland swimmers to be honored were Lisa Gillespie, Leah Otto, Garrett Myers and David Gillespie.

Kostoff set records for 15 and 16-year-olds in the 500-yard freestyle (4:19.13), the 1,000-yard freestyle (8:49.97), the 1,650-yard freestyle (14:52.39) and the 400-yard individual medley.

In addition, Kostoff set records in the 800-meter freestyle (8:00.71), 1,500-meter freestyle (15:17.77) and 400-meter individual medley. He swam the anchor leg for the 400-meter freestyle relay team that had the fifth fastest time (3:44.0).

David Gillespie, a student at Magnolia Elementary School, finished second in the nation among 9 and 10-year-olds in the 100-meter backstroke (1:17.60). He was 10th in Foothill Little League just keeps growing

By Phillip Barnett

If the late E.F. Schumacher, author of the book "Small Is Beautiful," had lived to see the progress of the Upland Foothill Little League, he would have changed the title of his famous piece to "Big Is Better."

Twenty-six years ago, Upland Foothill League consisted of two teams that played on Flower Field.

As the league approaches the conclusion of the 1983 season, 27 teams share Flower Field, which still stands, but now houses two diamonds, a large snack bar center and plenty of parking space to accommodate the league's avid group of supporters who come to watch some 300 kids compete.

The league has also approached somewhat of a milestone as it unveiled a brand new field for its senior league teams.

First-year league president Bill Bryan considers the formation of the new field, located across the street from Memorial Park, quite an accomplishment, especially since the league started with virtually next to nothing to get the project off the ground.

"I think it's unusual for a Little League that's operating on a $50,000 budget to get a field prepared to play on," said Bryan.

He explained that a majority of the league budget costs is spent on such expenditures like snack bar supplies, umpires, grounds keepers, pictures, insurance and trophies.

The new senior league field exists mainly due to the donations and fund-raising efforts by just about everyone who is involved in the league.

"We're pretty proud with what we've done. You can't imagine the effort the players, managers, representatives and other people within the structure of the board had put in to get this together," said Bryan. "They really busted their rear ends. Now we have a fine field for the kids to play on."

Bryan, a man who practices attributing credit to others, volunteered for the Upland Foothill presidency.

"I find myself in the mode of a director. I just make sure things are taken care of," he says of his position.

Bryan moved to Upland four years ago and became involved in the league when his daughter signed up two years ago.

"I've been involved in athletics all my life," says Bryan. "I enjoy the games and enjoy kids, too. It's really gratifying."

As a former infielder at Mt. San Antonio College, Bryan helped the Mounties win two state junior college championships in the mid '60s. In the second championship game, Mt. SAC had to beat a pitcher by the name of Tug McGraw to claim another title.

Bryan was also a receiver in football and played at Mt. SAC and La Verne College.

At Mt. SAC, one of his teams lost just two games in one year, but in those two losses, SAC gave up over 100 points.

"Yes, those are always good experiences to look back on," said Bryan.

In 1977, Bryan worked with kids during the Special Olympics and is currently involved with an ASL soccer team. Next year he will be the coach of a select soccer team associated with the Chino Soccer Club.

Now, Bryan oversees a league that is making great strides and making a name for itself among the Upland residents. With all that has happened during his term as president, Bryan distributed all of the credit to others who are involved.

"This league succeeds from the people who are involved. They work hard and do an outstanding job," says Bryan. "They've been innovative and have followed through on their commitments. I really can't say enough about them."

Of course, there is always the matter of upgrading the league's financial status, and there is always room for a few improvements here and there, but Bryan just looks at dealing with those types of problems as taking another step in the right direction.

"Every administration has its problems and complexities that has to be dealt with," says Bryan. "But I see this league as a flourishing operation." □

Cucamonga Mets live for their Sundays

By Ron Witt

For many men in their 20's and 30's, Sunday mornings are reserved for such quiet pursuits as sleeping in, reading papers, attending church or watching sports on television.

For others, however, those same Sunday mornings aren't quite so relaxing — by design. These energetic souls are up early, busily gathering glove, bat, ball and cleats to gear up to play some old-fashioned hard ball.

They're members of the Cucamonga Mets, traditionally one of the area's best baseball teams to participate in Sunday-only competition.

The Mets, once the scourge of the Sunset League, have been a force in area baseball for two decades or more, and they continue a strong showing in a newly-organized, eight-team league called Adult Sports Incorporated based in Pomona.

Games are played at Chaffey and Chino High School fields starting at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. each Sunday.

With the winter season slated to

'They have playing together for a long time. They look forward to it. That's their Sunday. Some teams just play their games, and then the players go their separate ways. But we usually get together for a barbeque afterward.'

John Viveros

end June 5, the Mets — under longtime manager John Viveros — were unbeaten in eight starts and tied for the league lead with the Orange County A's.

Barring upsets, the co-leaders appear headed for a title showdown May 22 at Chaffey High School when they square off in a twin bill starting at 11 a.m.

Other league members chasing the pair are the Pomona Mets, Redlands Phillies, Montclair White Sox, Pomona Bombers, Diamond Bar Royals and Pomona Frank's Liquor.

Viveros has been associated with the team off and on since 1961 at a time when they were known as the Cavaliers. He began his second stint as manager in 1968 (when the team changed its nickname to the Mets) and has been in the position since.

How does the current squad stack up with the others through the years? Pretty well, thank you.

"This is a very good team," declares Viveros, who at age 40 can still play some first base occasionally when the Mets are short on players. "It's strong offensively and defensively."

"We have pretty good pitching, the most pitching we've ever had," he appends in reference to right-handers Mike Dannewitz and Ross Cavavos plus southpaws Gibby Valdez and Rod Weigand.

Other players on the team include Ralph Valdez (first base, designated hitter), Wayne Redfearn (DH, first base, catcher), John's brother Ernie Viveros (catcher, third base), Pat Proulx (shortstop), Rene Moreno

High academic standards not new for Curtis

By Phillip Barnett

When high school academic standards were set at a C average for those participating in extra curricular activities, student athletes like Carl Curtis didn't bat an eye.

Curtis, an Upland resident and freshman at Pomona College, and his buddies on the Sagehen baseball squad don't worry about such things.

At Pomona College, part of the academically renown Claremont Colleges, athletics is just something to do in order to keep the limbs loose.

"There are a lot of smart guys here, no doubt," says Curtis who fits right in with the Pomona College student body.

Curtis should know how important it is to get a good education. Donald Curtis, Carl's dad, is a pediatrician with an office in Upland. His mother, Maxine, is Curtis' biggest fan.

"She was at all my games. She loves to watch me play," said Curtis about his mother, who was known to whip up a batch of tasty cookies for the team from time to time.

Before arriving at Pomona College, Curtis went to Webb School, a college preparatory school for boys in Claremont.

There, Curtis explained, academics were the number one priority. If there was time, then sports would be allowed into the picture.

"They stressed academics to all the athletes," said Curtis. "If you had to miss practice to get your work done, they would understand."

Curtis chose to attend Webb since his brother had been a student there before.

"My brother went there because my family stressed academics," said Curtis, "but it was my choice to attend Webb, they didn't influence me."

Last year, Curtis enrolled at Pomona College for the same reasons he did at Webb. Although he still hasn't settled on a major, he currently maintains a 3.2 grade point average, which he almost matched at the plate.

Curtis also played on the Pomona-Pitzer football in the fall. He saw limited duty at tight end, but is optimistic about the 1983 campaign.

"They're going to change the offense next year, and the coach says he might find a place for me then," says Curtis.

Curtis also hopes to be a key figure on a young Sagehen baseball squad next year, when he expects his 10 years of baseball experience will pay off.

"My father pushed baseball a little bit," said Curtis. "It's something I've done ever since I was 9 years old."

At Webb, Curtis was co-MVP on the baseball team, and before high school, he starred in the Upland Foothill League.

If Curtis is the star or not, he knows that he'll get support from his parents.

"Ever since I was little, they've been completely supportive of me," says Curtis. "They're real big sport fans."

The Curtises are even bigger fans of academics, so if it's in the classroom or on the field, Carl Curtis knows that his biggest fan club is backing him up.

the 200-meter individual medley and 13th in the 100-meter butterfly.

Upland High student Lisa Gillespie was ninth in both the 100-meter freestyle (59.59) and the 200-meter freestyle (2:07.96) among 13 and 14-year-old girls.

Gillespie was 13th in the 400-meter freestyle (4:26.60) and 15th in the 800-meter freestyle (9:06.06).

She was a member of eight relay teams that finished in the top 16: the 200-meter freestyle (1:54.66), the 400-meter freestyle (4:08.64), 800-meter freestyle (9:00.39), 400-meter medley, 200-yard freestyle (1:41.24), 400-yard freestyle (3:38.58), 800-yard freestyle (7:59.80) and 400-yard medley (4:08.97).

Joining Gillespie on the relay teams were Otto, Diana Dickson and Gina Cuevas.

In boys competition, Myers was 11th in the 200-meter breast stroke (2:37.42) among 13 and 14-year-olds.

(outfield), David Long (outfield, pitcher), Wayne Parrish (outfield), Jeff Sarratt (center field), Chuck Herren (outfield), Robert Meza (pitcher), BeeGee Kimbrell (shortstop) and Albert Leyva (second base).

Many of the players are products of local high schools and colleges, and a few — like Dannewitz and Proulx — have some professional experience at the minor league level.

At 19, Leyva is the youngest member of the current band of Mets. Most are in their 20's, and Cavavos is reportedly the elder statesman at 33.

The Mets' most famous alumnus, Viveros says, would have to be Rick Adams, an infielder with the California Angels.

"He's been with us the last five or six years," the skipper informs. "It's worked out great for him."

Viveros tabs Jim Lentine, Nick Leyva and Ken Walker as the top hitters he's had over the years. □

Students get a first-hand look at city hall

"I'm fairly certain of what I'm going to be doing and I'm making it happen myself."

Donna Hawkins, who served as police chief for the day, said she wanted to get a first-hand look at what her father — a law enforcement officer — does for a living. Hawkins, 17, who is also not involved in student government at the high school, said she didn't think there would be any problem for women desiring to become a city's chief of police — in the future, that is.

"The kids don't seem to be concerned with sex identification," Goggin said. "Some of the guys ran for positions that you would think would only be occupied by women."

Hawkins' task for the day included proposing that a police cadet program be introduced to the city. She is interested in obtaining a college degree in computer engineering.

Greg Sweetwood, 18, said he opted for a post on the planning commission because of a basic interest in how the city works, and because it looked like "an interesting job to take on for a day."

His group was charged with trying to decide whether to permit a pizza establishment to be built adjacent to a miniature golf course near Mountain Avenue and Seventh Street.

Chaffey College gets steam sterilizer

A $15,000 autoclave, or steam sterilizer, is now in use at Chaffey College.

Donated to the Life Science Division of the college by the Price Family Foundation of Upland, the autoclave is a necessary piece of equipment for the microbiology classes and some biology classes.

"These classes are essential to the Registered Nursing Program at Chaffey which the Price family has generously supported for a number of lot," Sweetwood said. "I plan to go to college and major in political science."

"I think I'd like to maybe run for city council if I ever had the chance."

years with various grants," Division Chairperson Muriel Zimmermann said.

"Without this piece of equipment, the microbiology classes offered at Chaffey could not be conducted. At a time when support of education seems at its lowest ebb, it is well worth noting the generous support being offered by some private organizations."

A plaque to be placed on the sterilizer will acknowledge the Price Foundation as the donor.

Camp-O-Rama open to public

The second annual Camp-O-Rama and Explorer Expo, the largest public showcase for the Boy Scouts of America will be held May 20-21 at California State University, Dominguez Hills in Carson.

Camp-O-Rama, which attracted more than 15,000 Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers and an additional 15,000 spectators last year, is considered to be Scouting's most spectacular event.

Among the featured guests at this year's event will be Lord Robert Baden Powell, the grandson of the founder of the Boy Scouts. Lord Baden Powell, a native of England, is traveling from his home to serve as Honorary Camp Chief. In addition, numerous sports personalities and motion picture and television celebrities will attend the two-day extravaganza.

The camp will open at 5 p.m. on Friday, May 20, with the set up of the camp sites. On Saturday, May 21, the camp officially opens to the public with opening ceremonies at 11 a.m. in the Velodrome.

Tickets for Camp-O-Rama are $2 and are tax deductible. Neighborhood Scout packs and troops will share proceeds from ticket sales with the Los Angeles Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America. For ticket information, call the Los Angeles Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

Caffeine's link to cancer will be under discussion

Recent findings on caffeine, diet and cancer, and trace minerals are among the topics to be discussed at the second annual Nutrition Symposium, on Sunday in the Randall Visitor's Center at Loma Linda University, from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

John Scharffenberg, M.D., Ph.D., will present data on the involvement of caffeine in the development of human cancer and gastrointestinal disorders, as well as birth defects and cardiovascular changes.

Terry Shultz, Ph.D., assistant professor of nutrition, School of Health (SH), will give details of the report on diet, nutrition and cancer, published last year by the National Academy of Science.

Kenneth Burke, Ph.D., R.D., associate professor of nutrition, SH, will examine the food additive theory of hyperactive children and the effect of food toxicants in human health. Winston Craig, Ph.D., M.P.H., R.D., assistant professor of nutrition, SH, will present the latest developments in trace mineral research.

John Jennings, M.D., assistant professor of medicine, School of Medicine (SM), will present information on aging, nutrition, and bone disease. New concepts in the relation of diet to dental carries will be presented by John Leonora, Ph.D., professor of physiology, SM.

Three West Valley schools win journalism contest prizes

Three West Valley schools were sweepstakes winners at the Southern California Journalism Education Association (SCJEA) On-the-Spot Contest Finals at Alta Loma High School on May 7.

Taking the top prize was Vina Danks Junior High School which captured first place sweepstakes and the perpetual trophy in the junior high division.

Pioneer Junior High School took second place sweepstakes and also second place yearbook sweepstakes. Alta Loma High School garnered second place sweepstakes in the high school division.

Over 500 students representing over 84 junior high and senior high schools competed in the finals. All writers had placed in previous area write-offs to qualify for the SCJEA contest.

Individual winners from Vina Danks were Bryan Burns, first place in sports; Renee Whited, second place, feature writing; Russell Small, third place, news; and Mike Medina, fifth place, sports.

Pioneer Junior High School writing winners were Teresa Wilson, second place, news; Bob Hale, third place, sports; and Jennifer Wolfe, fourth place, news. Pioneer's yearbook team of Sharon Doughty, Teri Elworth, Wendy Lair, and Jessica Peterson captured the second place yearbook sweepstakes award.

Winners from Alta Loma High School were Judy Meath, fourth place, features; Diana Twadell, fourth place, sports; and Tara Mann, ninth place, news.

De Anza Junior High School winners were Suchira Myeryong, third place, cartooning, and Rex Myer, who took fourth place in sports. Mike Tuma of Vernon Junior High School placed fourth in cartooning.

Student writers first listened to presentations and then completed stories in an hour. Stories were judged by staff members of area newspapers.

Entrants in the photography category took news or features photographs of the event, to be mailed in for competition.

Brunner, a senior at Upland High School, will major in business/communications/computer science at USC.

He has been a member of the California Scholarship Federation for four years, been a member of the varsity basketball team for three years, played football, been on the Math Team for three years and in the French Club for two years.

USC is a private, coeducational, non-sectarian university. Undergraduate enrollment is 9,600 with a freshman class of 2,700. According to University figures, almost half the freshman class receives financial aid. Graduate enrollment is about 11,000.

Army Reserve Pvt. Dennis A McLean, son of Alene McLean, Upland, has completed basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C.

During training, he received instruction in drill and ceremonies, weapons, map reading, tactics, military courtesy and justice, first aid and Army history and traditions.

The private is a 1981 graduate of Upland High School.

Wheeling for funds

solicited companies and corporations. Besides the individuals who'd maintained contact with us and donated money for the first two rides, we received contributions from the Cask 'n' Cleaver Restaurant, Miller's Outpost and Denny George Accounting in Ontario.

"We hooked computers into the bicycles to measure pulse rate, pace, heart beat, if we're allowed to have a break. The computer told us everything. This one, however, was our hardest ride because we'd had two years to get soft and cushy. Our behinds just stung. I don't want to see a bicycle seat for at least a few weeks. But it was worth every moment of pain because the money will make it possible for more kids to take part in the Special Olympics.

"We received incredible support from our professional colleagues and job associates. It became a project of love for everyone involved. The Special Olympics this year will be at UC Berkeley because the regular Olympics pre-empted the usual location at UCLA.

"The Special Olympics is such a good thing that for any kid to be cut out of it would be a disaster. The extra money will enable more students to take part. We don't have any overhead costs and pay for our own equipment and expenses, so 100 percent of the funds raised will go for transportation, uniforms, equipment and greater participation of the Dominga High students in the Special Olympics.

"The cycling fund-raiser is getting so big that we may have to set up a special operation next year. Denny George Accounting has offered to help us establish a special account and whatever is needed. We'll be expanding our solicitations to service clubs and more companies next year. The Special Olympics is an event that has sold itself on its merits and the benefits to the kids participating." □ presents a Distinguished Author of Literature for Young People Award to Dana Brookins.

Local author receives honors

Dana Brookins, local author of books for young people, was recently honored by the Reading Collegium of the University of La Verne, at a dinner at the Arbor Restaurant in Upland.

The Reading Collegium, a support group for the reading program at the University, presented Brookins with its first Distinguished Author of Literature for Young People Award. The author, who lives in Rialto and teaches in the Educational Resources Center at Chaffey College, was also the recipient of an Edgar Allen Poe Award in the Juvenile Category for her title "Alone in Wolf Hollow."

"Who Killed Sack Annie," Brookins' newest book for children, was released in April.

Bill Martin Jr., nationally known author, educator and lecturer, was the featured speaker of the evening.

For more information about the Reading Collegium, an organization concerned with providing quality professional services for classroom teachers, reading specialists and their parents, call the University at 593-3511.

Workshop to teach Jewish traditions

Jewish adults who wish to experience the joys, customs and rituals of Jewish holiday celebrations can register now for a 10-month holiday workshop series beginning in October.

Workshops are designed to enrich family life as participants learn the rites, songs, music, recipes and history of each holiday. The 24-session series will be held weekly at 16 sites throughout Los Angeles, Ventura, San Bernardino and Orange counties.

The holiday workshops are co-sponsored by Jewish Federation Council's Bureau of Jewish Education and Stephen S. Wise Temple, in cooperation with the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, United Synagogues of America and Federation of Reconstructionist Congregations and Fellowships. Developed by Patricia S. Golden at Stephen S. Wise Temple, the series has been operating since 1973, with the Bureau acting as co-sponsor for the past four years.

Classes, conducted by professional educators or former workshop students average about 20 to 25 students in a group. Registration is necessary and will continue through August. For further information contact Fredi Rembaum, (213) 852-1234, extension 2228.

They already have 20 to 25 volunteer "printers" but need many more people. "Since each of the sites will open for a five-hour period, we're going to need a lot more volunteers," Newman said.

Volunteer sessions will be arranged before those dates. To volunteer call Schwartz (981-6150) or Newman (985-3982).

"I'm very optimistic," Schwartz said. "We have 5,000 children in the district, plus they have brothers and sisters at home. I'd like to see everyone of them on one of those two days. Then I'd feel like we really accomplished it." □

Bruce Koyle to receive Eagle ranking Tuesday

Bruce Koyle, son of Ronald and Susan Koyle, Upland, will receive his Eagle rank on Scouting Day, Tuesday in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Alta Loma. Court of Honor begins at 7 p.m.

Koyle has earned 21 merit badges, is leader of his troop and given many hours of service. In addition to these many requirements he planned and carried out a major service project for a non-profit organization.

For his project, he refinished wood stretchers for the Red Cross and also built them some new ones that were needed. Most of the materials needed for the stretchers were donated by Lumber companies in Upland, Ontario and Pomona.

Koyle, an Upland Junior High School student, has been involved in student government, activities and has been on the A or B honor roles at his school.

In scouting he has served as Blazer Patrol Leader, Assistant Patrol Leader, Patrol Leader, Senior Patrol Leader and Den Chief for the Cub Scout den. He has also attended Junior Leadership Training and has been an instructor for all past three Blazer Day Camps.

The fledgling Eagle has also earned all the religious awards possible and is currently working on the Duty to God Award.

Koyle has been an honor carrier for the Daily Report for the past three years.

Customer lounge at Beechcraft West, a new business aviation facility at Ontario International Airport

Beechcraft opens new Ontario facility

Beechcraft West, Inc., a subsidiary of Beech Aircraft Corporation, has opened a new business aviation facility — its third in the greater Los Angeles area — at Ontario International Airport.

The complex contains more than 39,000 square feet of building space on more than 14 acres of land, and provides a full spectrum of aviation services to the West Valley and adjacent desert communities.

The complex represents an investment of more than $1.6 million, "and demonstrates Beechcraft West's continued confidence in the future of business aviation in Southern California," said Linden Blue, president and chief executive officer of Beech Aircraft Corporation. "This new facility is representative of our commitment to customer service and quality."

Opened originally in October 1971 as a branch sales office of Beechcraft West-Van Nuys, the Ontario Division primarily sold Beechcraft Bonanzas in an area stretching from Pasadena to the Colorado River.

"With the increasing number of Beechcraft owners and operators in the areas," said Ontario Division General Manager Henry Sickels, "we felt we needed this new facility to give those customers expanded, more localized, personalized service."

Beechcraft West-Ontario currently employs 22 people.

The new facility features a 85 by 300-foot airplane hangar, with an attached 20-foot building running the entire length of the hangar. It will be used for parts and equipment storage.

A 30 by 106-foot, two-story combination administration building and terminal area completes the new construction.

Beechcraft West-Ontario Division is one of 29 wholly-owned subsidiaries which make up Beech Holdings, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Beech Aircraft Corporation.

The new facility is expected to bring into the area:

- More than $300,000 annually in wages and salaries paid to employees. Using the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's "multiplier effect," which estimates that each payroll dollar multiplies through the community five times, Beechcraft West-Ontario's payroll will add an additional $1.5 million annually to the area economy.
- More than $24,000 paid annually in utilities.
- More than $200,000 paid in local taxes, and, with the new facilities, that figure is expected to increase substantially in the near future.

- More than a $500,000 paid for aircraft fuel, which will be purchased from local suppliers and re-sold to customers.

- More than $1.6 million for construction of the facility itself, and a one-time expenditure of more than $100,000 for tools, etc., to bring the facility up to standards to service the entire line of Beechcraft.

In addition to direct payments, Ontario is expected to serve more than 400 to 500 customers per month — travelers who will buy meals, services, lodging, entertainment, and many other items from local business establishments.
